1. An installation in Leipzig W 26, Linkelstr. 59, on the former premises of the Bussing-NAG Diesel Motor Works, is occupied with the overhauling of six-cylinder motors, of which about twenty have been observed being trucked in on an average every day. It is estimated that this maintenance shop employs about 600 Germans. The Soviet officers attached to this unit live mainly in the neighboring Blanckstrasse 4-6. It is judged that this is the largest motor-overhaul shop being run by the Soviet armed forces in Germany. The motors normally overhauled in this shop are of such a shape that it seems likely they are normally installed in pairs (shape and position of the exhaust).
